

THE MEMPHIS DAILY APPEAL.

MEMPHIS, FRIDAY, MAY 3, 1861.

Daily Appeal.

THE WAR AND THE TIES OF CON-SERVATIVE COMPATIBILITY BETWEEN TWO RELATIVES.

We present for the benefit of our readers the following interesting correspondence between two sons of the city, one of whom is a distinguished lawyer and a native of Virginia who supports BELL, and another a native of Tennessee who supported EVERETT for the presidency in the late November election. It is a subject of the feelings that most of us have with regard to the war, that the ties of consanguinity now separated from each other by accident, and scattered throughout the North and the South. We only give the extract that relates to political matters:

April, 1861.

My Dear JOHN.—I hope this reaches you, will have heard of the armed occupation of Clark's City. Every day it develops more and more that the South has won the war.

Our soil and climate are varied and different to every country in the world.

The intelligent, thoughtful,

and upright men of the South.

The article of war were to the troops.

They are to work night and day on the batteries, relieved every six hours.

Major Bradford is in command at that post.

Very truly yours,

J. T. SWANEE, OFFICER OF THE CONFEDERATE NAVAL OFFICE.

Yesterday we all four officers of the naval department, and myself, attended a meeting at Richmond, in purchasing the steamer "Cleopatra," which had been captured by the rebels.

All classes seem ready with the condition of things throughout all the fleet.

There are not many people now as united and ready to expect anything but a bloody war.

It is to talk of the peace. Our people have no right to expect that; they had hoped for it with a patient and devoted heart.

Our men are as courageous as any.

They have been born to it.

They have been born to it.
